INTRODUCTION

Since the founding of Zeitz MOCAA, and its much-celebrated opening in September 2017 as an independent, non-profit organization, the institution has established a robust program and agenda to make a significant contribution to the development of contemporary art from Africa and its diaspora. As a nascent institution based in Cape Town, South Africa, the ambition signified by the architecture and scale of our building have continued unabated in its various contexts, both locally and internationally.

OUR VISION

Under the leadership of Koyo Kouoh, Executive Director & Chief Curator, significant progress has been made in securing the operational and curatorial foundations of the organisation, as Zeitz MOCAA continues to grow its constituents and supporters daily. The Covid-19 pandemic proved a trying period for the museum, and the recent opening and wide support for Tracey Rose's much-awaited solo exhibition "Shooting Down Babylon", signified an important moment for the museum as it reasserted unparalleled commitment to critical dialogue.

OUR MISSION

Zeitz MOCAA is a site for the conversations, debates, and storytelling that contemporary art enables. The historization of art remains a crucial and unique catalyst for the analysis of our societies, in that its focal point is in the space of the imaginary. The urgency of approaching modern and contemporary art from Africa and its diasporas from a spectrum of different practices, that defy and go beyond the academy, is a central axis for the museum.

The intention is to establish the museum as a facilitator and producer of dense discourse of artistic histories in Africa and its diaspora, which deals with the forms and aesthetics produced by the makers, which in turn reveal the knowledge systems that analyse and project the human experience from African perspectives.
